July Issue: Sexual Exploitation of Youth

NEWSLETTER July 2021

Realities and Impacts

It's sexual exploitation when someone coerces, lures or involves a child or youth in a sexual act, including pornography. It may be in exchange for something—money, drugs, shelter, food, protection, transportation, or to fulfill emotional needs.

When a young person is being sexually exploited by a third party for profit, that's human trafficking. Often the third party is called a pimp, trafficker, or boyfriend. Or sometimes, it might be a peer.

While pop culture may lead young people to believe that the sex trade is glamourous, the realities are very different. Youth who are exploited in the sex trade:

Harm their Physical and Mental Health

Are forced to engage in the sex trade and have very little money of their own.

(Money goes to Pimp/Boyfriend)

Will encounter frequent physical and sexual violence

Are forced to engage in sexual acts in unsafe locations.

Community Resources

People who have been sexually exploited are not just victims. Healing is possible. Surrounding a young person with non-judgmental, consistent supports can help to build up their confidence and resiliency. Below are some resources available for youth who are being sexually exploited, their families and service providers.

Canadian Human Trafficking Hotline If you are a victim/survivor or believe someone else might be, call the hotline at 1-833-900-1010.

Girls Action against Trafficking and Exploitation (GATE)
